Core skills passed

By June Sanns

A pilot program of the skills portion of the Core Curriculum to be implemented in September was passed by University Senate at their March 7 meeting.

The proposal passed after two meetings of discussion with a vote of 33 yes, 10 no and three abstentions. President Leland Miles was one of the three who abstained.

Two amendments to the proposal were introduced at the meeting. Edward D'Angelo, a philosophy professor, said that in the areas of Quantitative Skills and Physical Skills more courses from different departments should be included.

In the area of Quantitative skills, students may fulfill the three credit requirement by taking either a course in Finite Mathematics, a course in Algebra with Applications or get an exemption if they are majoring in an area such as mathematics, engineering, the sciences or business.

In the area of Physical Skills, students will be required to take two one credit courses in Physical Activity.

D'Angelo said, "Students should be given a variety of choices in any given area."

Richard Daigle, an English professor, responded to D'Angelo's suggestion by saying that if we shouldn't give students at the University anything they don't like or anything that would be difficult for them, then "let's close the doors and go home."

Chairman of the Core Commission, Albert Schmidt, said that exploration on alternative courses has already occurred. He added that the core courses will be periodically reviewed.

D'Angelo's amendment did not pass. The vote was 19 yes and 19 no.

The other amendment was introduced by Frances Brown, a psychology professor, who feels that psychology should be an alternative to fulfilling the Oral Communication and Listening requirement.

Students would have to take a course in either Interpersonal Communication or Public Communication now to fulfill the requirement.

Brown said the course was important to students to help them adjust to college life.

The amendment lost by voice vote. Some members of the Senate felt that psychology was not a skill.

Some discussion occurred on how students would be chosen for the pilot program.

Schmidt said there would probably be about 120 to 150 students. Students, he said, would be asked to volunteer if they don't, then some students would be chosen.

Schmidt also said that the purpose of the pilot program is not to get clear statistical results but to approve the process of implementation for when the Core Curriculum will be fully implemented in September of 1980.

It is hard to estimate the cost of the complete Core Curriculum, Schmidt said, but he hopes that it can be determined in a few months to present to the Senate.

The Senate will have to determine by vote whether or not the University will have a Core Curriculum.

Knights finish 4th

With a final record of 24-8, the '78-79 team will go down in history as one of the University's best teams ever.

Silence sometimes says a lot more than a million words. In the Purple Knight locker room, only moments after the heart-breaking loss to North Alabama which crumbled the gold in their basketball dreams to dust, the Knights were slowly undressing, trying to forget what had just happened.

Over 1,000 miles away from home, in a land of pastures and cows, the basketball fantasy the Knights created with a beautiful passion ended Friday night in bitter frustration at the hands of the Lions 83-80.

The Knights had carried their team-inspired magic very far this year, through 21 regular season wins, through three powerful playoff wins. And for little more than a half in the NCAA semi-final at the Hammon's Center in Springfield, Mo., it appeared that their patented winning ways would continue as the Knights built a 47-38 lead with 17:57 left in the game.

The first half had been all Knights. Al Bakunas leaping skyward for 12 rebounds, Jerry Steuerer driving relentlessly for 12 points, Hurdle leaping skyward for 12 points and Gary Churchill displaying moves that the Harlem Globetrotters haven't seen yet.

After Churchill connected with Bakunas for a fast-break layup making it 47-38, the Lions became uncaged and revived. Approximately four minutes later, the game became a very different one. Banging baskets from every direction, taking advantage of an unusual Knight cold spell from the floor, taking advantage of four Knight turnovers, Alabama leaped into a 60-53 lead.

"I can visualize us missing four to five shots in a row inside the foul line and that's very unusual for us," lamented a weary Coach Bruce Webster following the game. "I don't think it was poor shot selection. I thought we missed shots that are usually made. That's what you live and die by."

"Well, we have to miss sometimes," Churchill softly said in the locker room where the only other sound was the roar of the crowd in the second game. "During the season, well, we gotta say we were shooting and hitting the shots when we needed them. I don't know, maybe the percentages caught up with us. That's going to happen. We played when we had to and they played when they had to."

"I think the key to the game was they got off to a fast start in the second half, not us," Churchill went on. "If we came out and got a few quick hoops, we could have blown the game wide open. We usually play our best basketball in the second half. But hey, we still played a good game tonight, but they just jumped out to the lead in the opening minutes of the second

Council discusses food

By GEORGE DALEK

The Student Council heard a food committee from the committee's chairman, Matt Boughton, at its March 7 meeting.

Boughton fielded questions from council members on what has been accomplished at the food committee meetings.

He said student complaints about the food is small number but has led to an explosion of complaints. He said that the complaints are mostly psychological and that 50 percent of the students' attitude gets down on the food when they walk into Marina Dining Hall. At this point, one council member asked Boughton if he held a degree in psychology.

Boughton noted that 200 students dropped the meal plan this semester. Of those 200, 80 left campus, and 60 left the University altogether.

He said that ARA has been very cooperative and helpful in trying to solve the food problem at Marina.

RHA President, Vytautas Martinenas, noted that ARA Director of food services, Paul Lukens, will speak at the RHA meeting on March 21.

In other council matters, John Beszczak, senator for the College of Engineering said he doesn't like the "adverse" publicity being given the council by the SCRIBE. He wants a commitment by council to take credit for the good things they do. This would include each member taking an active role in their constituency, taking a problem no matter how small, attacking it and solving it. He suggested that the SCRIBE do a weekly article about the council solving these problems and call the article "What We Did". Senior Class president Mary Dorsey said, "Some of us have been doing this all year but for those of you who feel you have done nothing, then go ahead and vote on it."

Council advisor Sal Mastropole, director of student activities, said Beszczak's idea was a good one but it comes a little late. He said he's a "bit disappointed with some members of the council. It's the end of the year and some members haven't even got started. Every member of council should feel like they're on the hook 7 days a week." No action was taken on Beszczak's proposal.

In the treasurer's report, council reported a budget of $4,764.95. Council allocated $636 to WPKN so they could send two broadcasters to cover the Purple Knights basketball team at the NCAA Division II basketball finals at Springfield, Mo. Council also allocated $462 to pay for 12 buses to Yale University for the Purple Knights NCAA quarterfinal game against St. Joseph's of Indiana.

The council also announced that a "phonathon" will be held at Cortwright Hall starting March 28.

half and it was like even just about the rest of the way."

The Knights surged back into the tempo when Bakunas skied for a rebound, drove downcourt and passed to Steuerer who flew for the layup and was fouled in the process. His swish of the free throw made it a four-point game, 60-56, with nine minutes left.

It soon became a one-point game two minutes later when Steuerer splashed a shot from the corner, 65-64. But the Lions immediately retaliated with six unanswered points.

With their hopes fading away, the Purple Knights climbed to within five, 73-68 when Bakunas powered his way for a layup with 3:05 left. In their next possession, the Lions attempted to devour a chunk of the remaining minutes with a freeze. Ball control extraordinary's, the Lions produced a wild chase in their zone, and were too elusive to be caught. With no other choice, Steuerer fouled Bill Montgomery.

The play for the turnover worked as Montgomery bounced the first shot of a one and one off the rim and Bakunas' who was amazing off the boards with 17 rebounds, plucked the ball from the air and passed it to Churchill who flipped it to Hurdle who made it 73-70 with 2:06 left.

Gerry Lavender countered for the Lions with a hoop from underneath (75-70) but Churchill raced downcourt with intense determination and quickly swished one, making it 75-72 with 1:31 left. Time for some Purple Knight strategy.

Webster called a time out and then inserted Greg Bayard and Steve Markowski for Steuerer and O'Neill for the purpose of committing a foul to bring the Lions to a one and one situation.

A second after, Markowski fouled Ottis Boddie, O'Neill and Steuerer re-entered the game. With pressure hovering over him, Boddie swished the first shot, but missed the second. But his missed turned into disaster for the Knights as Ron Darby snatched the rebound giving the Lions possession with 1:24 left.

It was O'Neill's turn to commit the foul, and the sophomore sent Perry Oden to the line for the one and one. Oden hit on his first attempt but missed on his second and Hurdle rocketed for the rebound. Another blow to Purple Knight hopes occurred when Steuerer to Bakunas pass was intercepted under the Bridgeport hoop by Lavender. Hurdle immediately fouled Lavender, sending him to the line for the one and one. His first shot bounced away into the waiting hands of Hurdle with 1:04 remaining.

The Knights, trying desperately for a desperate comeback, could not get the quick basket as Hurdle, Bakunas and Steuerer all fell short on shots. But with 50 seconds left, O'Neill tossed in a long-distant swish from the corner making it 77-74.

Another Bridgeport time out and Bayard and Markowski were reinserted. The strategy both shots making it 79-74 but O'Neill came right back with another unbelievable shot from the corner (79-76) and Bridgeport called another time out.

Bayard and Markowski came in again and O'Neill fouled Boddie. But the 6'2" guard frustrated the comeback thoughts with a pair of swishes.

With 36 seconds left, O'Neill hit yet another shot from the side (81-78). After the Knights called its final timeout, Markowski and Bayard came back into the game. The Knights first need was to cause a turnover, but when that failed, O'Neill had to foul Oden with 29 seconds left.

The strategy worked. Oden bounced his first shot off the glass and into the rebounding hands of Bakunas who passed to Churchill with time running down. Churchill could not be stopped on his way to the hoop as he scored, making it 81-80. On the next play, Churchill fouled out of the game, sending Oden back to the line.

Oden dimmed the Knight's light with a pair of free-throw swishes. Brian Moriarty, in for Churchill, took a shot he had to take with 12 seconds left but the shot hit the rim and bounced waywardly over the boards out of bounds.

With ten seconds left, Bakunas fouled Lavender, deliberately the ref said, which constitutes two shots. Lavender hit both giving the Lions a five-point lead. Not yet realizing that a miracle was out of their reach, Bakunas dumped one through for two as the clock ran out.

The Knights headed dejectedly back into their locker room.

"I'll tell ya," Bill Jones, Alabama's coach was saying after the game, "Bridgeport played a smart game. They played smart and almost came back and won it. Hey, we played one heck of a ballclub, a fantastic coached ballclub, an unselfish ballclub. They have nothing to be ashamed of."

"I'm very proud of my kids," Webster said, "I thought they gave the very best that they had. I looked at our charts and it was 23 rebounds to 13 rebounds in the second half. That was the whole difference."

"That was the whole story right there," Hurdle said. "I was getting double teamed on the box out. The guys were so sick (Steuerer battled sickness all week and was questionable for Friday's game). they couldn't follow their shots. Alabama got more rebounds than they normally would have."

"The reason they were able to come back," Hurdle added "was that nobody was moving, we stood still for a while trying to catch our breaths, you know. You gotta understand our guys were very sick. I'm not trying to make an excuse or something but we should have won if we were healthy. We should have blown them away."

"I don't think you saw the best Steuerer that you could see," Webster added. "The kid, I don't know if he'll ever recover. He's as sick as a dog and ran out of gas in the second half and his play showed it. I think that had an effect on us as a team."

The Knights had everything to be proud of. In a season that was supposed to be a rebuilding

Knights win Northeast Championship!

By CLIFF COADY

"I told you guys before the game that you really believed you could win tonight," Coach Bruce Webster says to his ecstatic troupe under a shower of sweet champagne. "OK, and you went out there and did it. And now, you're not going to Missouri just to be glad you're going. You're going to Missouri because you're going to be Number One."

The locker room hidden behind the basketball court at the Payne Whitney gym is definitely the place to be Friday, March 9, as the Purple Knight party continues. Surprising everybody but themselves and their fanatics, the Purple Knights had just sent shock waves of disbelief through the highly-rated St. Joseph's with a wildly exciting 92-82 victory that gave them the Northeast Championship.

The word in the local press leading up to the game was that St. Joe's would be an overpowering opponent capable of dominating the Knights. St. Joseph's had the height and the outside shooting.

The Knights had the soul and undeniable confidence.

"Any team that comes on the court and sees us 6-5, 6-5 and 6-4 up front especially when they have trees, might take us a little lightly," Churchill, bottle of champagne in hand, says. "I think they might have underrated us. We don't have the most talent in the world, but five-on-five, we're as good as anybody."

Most of the pre-game hype concerned one Carlton Hurdle. The sophomore had the responsibility of containing Dave Downey, an All-American center, taller and quicker than Hurdle.

Well, Hurdle refused to be intimidated by his much-talked-about opponent as he scored 25 points, including vicious slam dunk.

"They talked a lot of bull," Hurdle says. "You know, before the game, during the game, after the game. They press us down like underdogs, you know; I don't like someone saying they're better than me until they get out there on the court. We let them do the talking. We just got on the court, did what we had to do and they couldn't stop us."

"They talked about how great that guy (Downey) was. How he was going to dominate. So every time he scored, I had it in my mind I was going to come down and score. It was a personal thing."

Echoing through the champagne-soaked locker room is, "We're going to Missouri! We're going to Missouri!"

"I'm speechless, I don't know what to say," responds Al Bakunas to a question about the game.

The game? It was a game for all the games. The Knights displayed basketball talents never before seen in this universe. Leading by three, 35-32 at the half, the Knights played perfect basketball in the second half.

Jumping to a ten-point lead midway through half-number-two, the Knights stayed there on the strength of magical passwork of Gary Churchill, till the buzzer brought the fantastic Bridgeport fans to the floor for the net cutting ceremonies.

The Knights' triumph got off to a slow start as the Northeast Champions displayed some anxious feelings. Trailing 18-11, Churchill began to generate the power of the Knights' team game.

Leading 27-26, something happened that gave the Knights the tempo.

Neil Brown missed on a long-distance floater with 3:22 remaining and Steuerer rebounded. Streaking downcourt, Steuerer and Kevin Sims collided in front of the unsuspecting coach George Waggoner. The foul was called on Sims. Like an uncaged tiger, Waggoner attacked the referee with verbal abuse which immediately drew a pair of technical fouls, sending Churchill to the line for four foul shots and the Bridgeport crowd into a frenzy.

With unmatchable poise, Churchill swished all four shots, skyrocketing the Knights' lead to 31-26. Getting the ball back because of the technical, Churchill passed to Al Bakunas under the hoop for two points.

Heading into their half-time locker room, the Knights seemed to know they were destined to win this one. The Pumas, however, seemed worried and weary.

The Knights held on their three-point lead through the early moments of the last half until, with 16:22 left, the massive gym began to explode. Bakunas, after receiving an amazing pass from (who else?) under the boards, scored, making it 49-44.

On the third missed shot by the Pumas, Bakunas plucked the elusive ball from the air and, seconds later, scored from underneath, 51-44. A pass the full length of the gym faltered for the desperate Pumas and, seconds later, Bakunas scored another layup, 53-44. Downey gently swished one with 14:52 remaining and a Knights' turnover returned possession to the Pumas.

The fans' elation reached a new high on the next play. As Downey prepared to go up for a quick two points, Hurdle leaped imposingly and rejected the attempt with a mighty slap. Seconds later, Hurdle was racing downcourt with eyes of fire for the basket. His motion carried him through the air for a slam dunk for all slam dunks.

For the remaining 12 minutes, the frustrated Pumas could come no closer than seven points of the Knights' lead. The Knights shot 75 percent from the floor in the second half. Contributing greatly to that was Steuerer, who hit nine of 15, including his 1000th career point as a Purple Knight.

The court was the scene of pandemonium once the second time ran out. Many of the Bridgeport fans were the same cast of the wild entourage that invaded Waltham just a week earlier. Wearing the same purple and white make up on their faces and green hats with "Knights No. 1" written on it, the fans transformed their

Second-half woes sink Knights

By HARRY FERGUSON

To unknowing eyes, it appeared as if the Purple Knights from Bridgeport sent two basketball teams to Springfield, Mo. for the NCAA National championships last weekend; one to play in the first half and one to play in the second half.

The first-half squad was one of uncomparable talent, capable of ripping apart any team. They were the Purple Knights the 30 or so Bridgeport fans who made their way down south were familiar with.

But the second-half squad could not be recognized; they weren't reminiscent of the Bridgeport brand of excellence fans were so familiar with.

Saturday night it was a repeat performance, frighteningly familiar to Friday night's loss. Saturday night the Knights fell out of a 13-point half-time lead and eventually lost 81-78 to Cheyney State, the defending Division II champions.

"We had the innumerable ability to play one game out of two," Webster told reporters following the loss which placed the Knights as the fourth best team in America. "We had a seven point lead in the first game in the first half and we blew it and we blew a 15-point lead in the second half tonight."

"I have to give Cheyney a lot of credit; they were 15 points down in a consolation game and they came back real tough. They made us play poorly. It's to their credit. They changed their defense on us and they shot well. I don't think we got more than 25, 27 points against that defense."

The first three and a half minutes of the game was a presentation of the "Carlton Hurdle Show", the immaculate sophomore drove for unmolested layups on beautiful passes from Gary Churchill and sparked the Knights' 10-2 lead with 16:32 left in the half.

The domination continued through all of the first half as the Knights built up leads like 18-6, 25-8 and 51-38. The Wolves were hapless from the floor, only hitting on 34 percent. The Knights, meanwhile, were nothing less than awesome, amassing a 74 percent shooting average from the floor.

The highlight of the Knights' thunderstorm of points was a record breaking basket by Jerry Steuerer. At the 12:01 mark of the first half, Steuerer lofted a swish from the corner to break the Knight record for most points in a season.

The last play of the half gave an indication that the Wolves had no comeback plans. Kevin O'Neill drew a foul on defense while trying to steal the ball away from Andrew Fields with two seconds left. While O'Neill was swishing both ends of his one and one, the Cheyney players were almost inside their lockers, not waiting to see if the shots were made.

This was a game neither team really wanted to play. Obviously, both teams would rather have been getting ready to play in the championship game than playing in a consolation game. There was only pride at stake.

But the Wolves came out of the half-time locker room very recharged. What inspirational words did coach John Chayne say?

"Nothing," he said after the game. "I didn't have to say anything. We were champions last year and it's easy to ride the crest. It's easy to be worthy champions, but sometimes you have to be worthy losers."

"My guys came out with tears in their eyes tonight," he continued. "We didn't come ready to play. We just wanted to cry about not getting a piece of the pie."

"But I was the first one out of the locker room at halftime. If the players didn't come out to the court, I was going to play the damn game myself."

If the Wolves were recharged, the Knights were flat. The Knights saw their 13-point lead crumble to a 57-57 tie with 11:01 left in the game. The Knights had only scored six points in that time while the Wolves erupted for 19. But they didn't stop there. With 7:11 left in the game, John Hampton sailed for a layup which gave Cheyney State a 67-61 lead.

In the previous night's loss to northern Alabama, the Knights found themselves down by seven at one point midway through the second half. But they were able to tie it before eventually losing.

With 3:32 remaining, Steuerer scored to bring the Knights to within two—73-71. After Cheyney State turned the ball over, Steuerer connected for one of two foul shots, making it 73-72. But that was as close as the Knights could get as time ran out on their season.

"I feel really bad because I don't think you people saw us at our best," Webster said to questioning reporters. Steuerer is usually the guy we look to when things get out of hand. He didn't do it last night because of his illness and I was looking for someone else to do it tonight. It didn't happen."

"I just hope that someday we'll get another chance."

beautiful obnoxiousness into inspiration.

"I was never in a gym where the crowd was like this," says a tired but happy Steuerer in the locker room. "I don't know if it was the echo or what, but that was thunder out there. It was unreal."

Talk in the locker room turned to the weekend in Missouri, where the Knights would battle for the Number One ranking in the nation.

"It's been a great time this year, playing, winning," O'Neill says, "Yep, we're going down to Missouri and I think we're going to take it. We're going to down there and everybody's gonna do it up."

year, the Knights set the school on fire with their magic. But Carlton Hurdle could not be consoled.

"I'm a winner man," he said. "I didn't come over here to say, 'be happy for everything,' I wanted to win. I don't want to say, 'I half did,' I was here, I

"Hey, I said this all year," Doug Hohlbein, who scored the Knights' final points on a layup, says trying to absorb the greatness of the win, "It's the farthest this school has gone, and we're not done yet."

"I hope we're underrated out there, too," Churchill says referring to the fact that the Knights were 10-point underdogs in this one. "If they take us lightly out there, we'll shove it down their throats."

Larkin yells to Churchill, Steuerer and Bakunas, "We're going to Missouri. We ain't stopping here, we got two more games, we can win it all! We can win it all!!!"

They all believed him.

was here. I'm a winner. I've been a winner all my life. I didn't come here to go back third or fourth, I came here to go back first."

But then a smile came to his face.

"Hey, don't worry man. We will be back next year!"

Black festival very successful

The third annual Arts & Cultural Festival for the Black Student Alliance was profitable said Cyril Greenidge, President of black student alliance.

According to Greenidge, "the purpose of the festival was to bring people together."

The Black Student Alliance was privileged to have Gil Noble, as one of their guests, who is known for his Emmy award winning documentary about Malcolm X.

His lecture gave insight on the real "Malcolm X" and dispelled many negative connotations people might have had about the movements he led.

The movie "Brothers" was also shown in conjunction with the festival. This movie gave students an exposure to issues which existed during the 1960's. According to Cyril Greenidge there were many positive feedbacks about the movie.

The Black Student Alliance was also elated to have Franklyn Ajaye, comedian who also starred as 'Fly' in "Car Wash." Along with the entertainment of Franklyn Ajaye there was a disco party which featured DJ-Derrick from New York.

The Black Collages was another of the many events scheduled for the festival. This showed how the community as well as the students can come together and share their talents and culture.

The Art Davis Jazz trio also performed. "It was a great performance," said Greenidge. The Art Davis jazz trio played jazz music which most anyone can relate to.

According to Greenidge the festival's purpose was fulfilled due to the concerned efforts of the students. However, to their dismay the presentation scheduled with Julian Bond, Georgia State Senator, and Civil Rights Activist was cancelled because of a sudden illness.

Make money on free checking.

People's Plus Free Checking
Includes A Special Savings Account That Pays 5 1/4%.

People's Plus Free Checking is probably a lot better than yours. Because yours probably doesn't come with a built-in 5 1/4% Special Savings Account. And that's money out of your pocket. Worse yet, you may even be paying a service charge for your checking account.

At People's Savings Bank, we have a better way. It's called People's Plus, and here's how it works. First, we give you totally free checking. No service charges, no check charges and no minimum balance required. Then we give you something special. A Special 5 1/4% Savings Account that works together with your People's Plus Checking Account.

The trick is to keep a low balance in your checking account while leaving most of your money in your Special Savings Account. Whenever you need more money in your checking account, just call us up and we'll transfer what you want from savings to checking. And you can call during very unbank-like hours, too—24 hours a day, 7 days a week. And even the phone call is toll-free from anywhere in Connecticut.

With People's Plus, your money earns 5 1/4% right up to the day you need it. And that 5 1/4% is the highest rate allowed by law on regular savings.

So if our way sounds better than what you now have, just stop into any convenient People's branch to open your account.

People's Plus is a lot better than free checking. You'll actually make money on it.

...Residence Halls

amount on the refurbishing effort although it won't be as much as was spent refurbishing Bodine Hall last year.

"I don't want students in Warner, Schine to be unhappy because they won't be refurbished," said Waterman. "we will do the bigger, newer residence halls later."

Waterman also said the Miles fund, a grant given to residence halls for permanent residence hall improvements, will continue next year and the year after. The money from the Miles fund is distributed to each residence hall on the basis of population of the residence hall. This year the residence halls were given $19,000, according to Waterman.

RA application deadline

The Applications for Residence Advisors and Hall Director positions are available from the Office of Residence Hall in Seeley Hall. Those interested should contact Mrs. Sally Hughes for information at extension 4228. The deadline for applications is March 26. Group interviews will be held the week of the 26th.

New Policy

The Residence Hall Association passed a resolution revising the party policy in residence halls at their March 7 meeting.

The revisions clearly define the difference between a private party and a public party. A private party is defined as a party with less than 100 people, unadvertised and with a two keg limit. At private parties there is no need for security.

A public party is a gathering that is planned and advertised. Public parties have a limit of five kegs and are required to have security present, either campus police or the Bridgeport police. Public parties can only be held in the basement of each residence hall, none can be held on any upper floors.

The new policy means an end to floor specials similar to those in Bodine and other residence halls. Assistant Director of Residence Halls Paul DeGennaro went over the new policy point by point at the meeting, after he finished a vote was taken, the resolution passing the policy was unanimously.
